Please note:

Please check the structure of your modules!

By default the course commentary lists all courses that can be used for the modules offered as part of the curriculum. This does not mean, however, that the exam for each module can be taken in each course. If in doubt, please ask!

The module descriptions can be found via the university homepage description for the subject in question:

TM 1: Grundlagen der Literatur- und Kulturwissenschaft

4500037 Introduction to the Study of British Literature Haekel, Ralf
E-Proseminar SWS: 2; Anz. Teiln.: 25
Mi 12:00 - 14:00 Raum: KWZ 0.610 , wöchentlich
Mi 12:00 - 14:00 Klausur am: 05.02.2014

Kommentar The aim of the course is to introduce students of literature to the basic terminological and theoretical apparatus needed for the study of literature in the English language. The necessarily selective contents of the course fall mainly into 3 categories: critical terminology (for poetry, prose, and drama analysis), concepts of literary theory, and British literary history. An introduction to the methodology of academic research is also included (e.g., MLA data bank and bibliographic style).

There will be an announced mid-term test (50%) and a final exam (50%). You will need an overall 60% score to pass this course.

Please note: To ensure a good level of supervision, the number of participants is strictly limited to 25.

Reading: Each lecturer will announce on what required reading the course will be based.

Requirements: Attendance in the first session is mandatory.

Registration: in Stud.IP (opens October 16th and closes October 25th, 2013)

If you miss more than 2 sessions without a doctor's note, your name will be crossed off the list.

Kommentar CLC Grammar

This course is designed to help you develop and consolidate grammatical competence and practical skills in English necessary to achieve the C1-level in the CEFR, which is the general standard we are aiming at in our practical language teaching programme.

Listening/Reading Comprehension (LRC)

On the course, we will listen to and watch several videos from an online platform called TED (<http://www.ted.com/>) and read short articles which are broadly based on the TED videos. The advantage of basing the listening and reading on these videos is that everyone should, in theory, have access to them day and night. And they are free! Exercises and tasks will include answering comprehension questions, looking for the gist, writing summaries, learning new vocabulary, scanning and skimming texts for information, key facts, etc. Our main aims in doing this are to practise, hone and develop your listening and reading skills in English. The final test will be based on one short video clip for the listening part, following by a short text for the reading part.

Kommentar This is an introductory course on phonetics and phonology based on British English. You will have to learn some theory but the course is designed to be practical in that we will be discussing the way phonetics and phonology influence the meaning and the function of spoken and written English. You will also have to learn how to transcribe. The course is designed to overlap with the Practical Pronunciation Course (PPC) for British English. You cannot do the course without the Reader. Please also see my course descriptions in the Reader. Sign-up is via StudIP but there is no participation limit.

| Kommentar | This is an introductory course on phonetics and phonology based on American. The primary emphasis will be to give you tools to help you to understand and especially pronounce American English as perfectly as possible, though some basic theory is necessary to give you those tools. You will also be required to learn how to transcribe American English phonetically. You should take this course along with a Practical Pronunciation Course (PPC) for American English. There is no participation limit. |

From historical fiction to steampunk aesthetics, contemporary cultural production displays a strong and diverse fascination with the Victorian Age. So-called neo-Victorian writing revisits and re-imagines the 19th century from a postmodern, feminist and/ or postcolonial perspective, critically engaging with social and scientific developments of the period. Thus, the texts often move into the gaps and silences in Victorian writing and address questions of gender, sexuality, class, race or imperialism. In this seminar, we will trace the development of neo-Victorian literary writing and criticism and discuss novels as well as short fiction, poetry, and film adaptations (e.g. of A.S. Byatt's Possession) to find possible answers to the question: Why the Victorians?

Readings: Jean Rhys, Wide Sargasso Sea (1966); Sarah Waters, Fingersmith (2002). Students are expected to have prior knowledge of Victorian literature, especially Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre and The Woman in White by Wilkie Collins. Shorter texts and a bibliography will be made available on Stud.IP.

Requirements: Attendance in the first session in November is mandatory. Students are expected to have read the novels before the first block session in January.

Registration: via StudIP until 15. November.

Cultural Studies is an interdisciplinary area of research, exploring the ways and forms in which human beings experience the world. The theoretical concepts which will be analysed are concerned with the relations between cultural forms and their social, political and economic context as well as the symbolic attributions to practices of everyday life. The module is meant to give students an introduction to and overview of British Cultural Studies. This course is designed to accompany the introductory lecture series on British Cultural Studies (Cultural Studies VL) and help deepen students' understanding of the texts by discussing the various theories sketched in the lecture series. The focus will be on an active examination of the relevant critical ideas and theories, while the development of British Cultural Studies and the application of theories to fields of literary and cultural practice will also be considered. Please note: To ensure a good level of supervision, the number of participants is strictly limited to 25.

Due to both technological improvements and social developments during the 19th century in Britain, the opportunities for women writers to get published greatly increased. Many of these texts have developed into canonical voices and, thus, greatly influenced both scholarly and artistic work until today. But what exactly do the works of authors like Jane Austen or the Brontë sisters entail to be repeatedly chosen for film adaptations in the entertainment industry? This course aims at investigating why and how the film makers have picked up these novels in order to transform them into highly successful movies. For a thorough analysis of the films, we will focus on basic techniques and methods of film analysis in order to understand the aesthetic concepts used in each film and discuss them by asking ourselves if and why they suit characteristics of popular culture.

The sea, sea voyages, sailors, ship-wrecks and ships figure prominently in many popular and canonical anglophone texts. Although the maritime setting suggests recurring plots and themes, post-modern, postcolonial and neo-Victorian fiction creatively draws on and rewrites sea voyages. On this course we will discuss classics from the turn of the 19th/20th century as well as recent texts which take up the idea of sea voyages at the turn of the 20th/ 21st century. We will especially focus on the sea and ship as important literary spaces and the communities of sailors and travelers they forge on board.

Students will be expected to prepare at least one handout and write two response papers. The novels should be read prior to the start of term.

Readings: R. L. Stevenson, Treasure Island; Joseph Conrad, "Falk"; Yann Martel, Life of Pi; Amitav Ghosh, Sea of Poppies. Shorter texts will be made available on StudIP.

The Victorian period is frequently dubbed the "age of things" as the Victorians seemed to be especially fascinated with the proliferation of objects in and outside their homes. During this period museums were founded, the Great Exhibition of 1851 drew millions of visitors, the first department stores were opened, and due to thriving trade with the colonies and burgeoning mass production, all social classes could afford more goods than ever before. On this course we will discuss texts in the light of a postulated "material turn" in the study of Victorian literature and approach three novels from the angle of material culture studies and thing theory focusing on what kind of things and material practices they represent. Students taking this course should be willing to prepare at least one handout and write two response papers. The novels should be read prior to the start of term.

Nineteenth-Century Core Texts

Selbststudieneinheit SWS: 2; Anz. Teiln.: 25

Reitemeier, Frauke

Kommentar

This class is not a seminar in the sense that you meet with your fellow-students once a week, or for block sessions. Instead, you will be guided in an online course through reading, analysing and working with three to four core texts from nineteenth-century British literature with the help of an online tutorial that accompanies the lecture series on nineteenth-century literature. 'Active participation' means, in this case, that you hand in homework on a regular weekly or bi-weekly basis. If you are a night owl and find daytime classes rather tiring, this could be the right class for you - no-one minds when you complete your tasks, the only important thing is that you complete them. With the help of the online tutorial you will: - strengthen your skills in skimming texts; deepen your skills in assessing a text's core elements; - deepen your skills in comparing and evaluating key developments in nineteenth-century literature, over and above the information given in the lecture series.

Registration: Mandatory registration is through StudIP.

For further information please contact Dr. Reitemeier.

This course is only open for module B.EP.202.

During the Victorian Age, Britain saw an enormous expansion of wealth and power, technological innovations, scientific progress, political and social reforms. At the same time, it was an age of fundamental crises of faith: Darwin's theory of evolution and other scientific discoveries called religion into question, and towards the end of the century gender norms were seriously contested, and the belief into the empire and the ideology of progress began to erode. The lecture series will attempt at covering these conflicts, tensions, and paradoxes, as they are manifest in poetry, novels, essays, scientific discourses, drama and art; in short it will explore the Victorian world "which seems / To lie before us like a land of dreams, / So various, so beautiful, so new" (Matthew Arnold, "Dover Beach"). Lastly, it will address the Neo-Victorian hype in recent fiction and popular culture.

Readings: It is recommended to purchase the volume The Victorian Age from the Norton Anthology for poetry and shorter prose pieces. Novels: Joseph Conrad, Heart of Darkness; Charles Dickens, Hard Times; Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre; George Eliot, Middlemarch; Thomas Hardy, Tess of the D'Urbervilles. Plays: Oscar Wilde, The Importance of Being Earnest and George Bernard Shaw, Mrs Warren's Profession.

Background reading: Christopher Harvie and H.C.G. Matthew, Nineteenth-Century Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford 2000) and the chapters on Victorian Novelists in Terry Eagleton, The English Novel (London 2005).

Registration: via StudIP until 1. November.

Kommentar "What does it mean to be "Canadian"?" and "How could one define "Canadian literature"?" These are questions that, along with background knowledge on Canadian society and culture, this lecture series is meant to provide. Apart from surveying the development of Canada towards nationhood and then on towards its endorsement of multiculturalism as an official policy and its flirtation with ideas of the transnationalism, lectures will focus on issues of cultural contact and intercultural exchange, the role of culture in nation-building, Canadian literature's preoccupation with history and mythology, and its preferred form of historiographic metafiction, as well as Canada's self-promotion as a country open to immigrants while confronting accusation of marginalisation and racialization.

Required Reading: Articles on Canada, selected poems and short fiction (consult StudIP), the plays The Rez Sisters by Tomson Highway and Rice Boy by Sunil Kuruvilla, the graphic narrative Riel by Chester Brown and the following novels: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables (excerpts); Michael Ondaatje, In the Skin of a Lion; Joy Kogawa, Obasan; and Timothy Findley, The Wars.

Kommentar This class will introduce you to core texts and developments of contemporary Canadian literature in English. We will read some of the most exciting authors of Canada's multicultural literary industry, including Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro, Michael Ondaatje, Thomas King, Fred Wah and Rita Joe. We will place the works of these authors in the context of Canada's multicultural society and discuss in how far the texts develop, challenge and contribute to the construction of Canadian identity today. In addition, students will be familiarized with central theories and themes of Canadian literature as they have emerged over the past decades.

Readings: Please get a hold of the following books: Margaret Atwood, Moral Disorder (2006), Thomas King, A Short Story of Indians in Canada (2005), Alice Munro, Dear Life (2012), Michael Ondaatje, Divisadero (2007)

Other texts, including poems by Fred Wah, Rita Joe and secondary sources, will be provided as master copies or via StudIP at the start of the semester.

Requirements: Regular attendance, active participation, oral presentation and final exam and/or term paper.

Registration: via StudIP until 18.10.13.

Kommentar This project-oriented course aims at teaching students how to develop independent research projects in the field of postcolonial studies. After choosing a topic of their own interest, students will be guided in research methods as well as in reading and writing competences. The broad project focus on identification processes in postcolonial narratives allows students to find a topic of their own choice while at the same time enabling an intensive exchange among the individual participants in the project.

The results of each research project will be presented at a student conference towards the end of the semester. During this conference, the results of the project will be put up for discussion with interested fellow students. Here we will train presentation, debating and organisation skills and establish a network among students with similar research interests.

There will be three introductory meetings in which each participant can develop a thesis and will receive support in planning term papers and in finding literature. Later meetings will be arranged as needed.

At the end of the term, the research results will be handed in in the form of a written term paper.

Registration: via StudIP (until Oct. 7)

Kommentar During the Victorian Age, Britain saw an enormous expansion of wealth and power, technological innovations, scientific progress, political and social reforms. At the same time, it was an age of fundamental crises of faith: Darwin's theory of evolution and other scientific discoveries called religion into question, and towards the end of the century gender norms were seriously contested, and the belief into the empire and the ideology of progress began to erode. The lecture series will attempt at covering these conflicts, tensions, and paradoxes, as they are manifest in poetry, novels, essays, scientific discourses, drama and art; in short it will explore the Victorian world "which seems / To lie before us like a land of dreams, / So various, so beautiful, so new" (Matthew Arnold, "Dover Beach"). Lastly, it will address the Neo-Victorian hype in recent fiction and popular culture.

Readings: It is recommended to purchase the volume The Victorian Age from the Norton Anthology for poetry and shorter prose pieces. Novels: Joseph Conrad, Heart of Darkness; Charles Dickens, Hard Times; Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre; George Eliot, Middlemarch; Thomas Hardy, Tess of the D'Urbervilles. Plays: Oscar Wilde, The Importance of Being Earnest and George Bernard Shaw, Mrs Warren's Profession.

Background reading: Christopher Harvie and H.C.G. Matthew, Nineteenth-Century Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford 2000) and the chapters on Victorian Novelists in Terry Eagleton, The English Novel (London 2005).

Registration: via StudIP until 1. November.

Kommentar Due to both technological improvements and social developments during the 19th century in Britain, the opportunities for women writers to get published greatly increased. Many of these texts have developed into canonical voices and, thus, greatly influenced both scholarly and artistic work until today. But what exactly do the works of authors like Jane Austen or the Brontë sisters entail to be repeatedly chosen for film adaptations in the entertainment industry? This course aims at investigating why and how the film makers have picked up these novels in order to transform them into highly successful movies. For a thorough analysis of the films, we will focus on basic techniques and methods of film analysis in order to understand the aesthetic concepts used in each film and discuss them by asking ourselves if and why they suit characteristics of popular culture.

"What does it mean to be "Canadian"?" and "How could one define "Canadian literature"?" These are questions that, along with background knowledge on Canadian society and culture, this lecture series is meant to provide. Apart from surveying the development of Canada towards nationhood and then on towards its endorsement of multiculturalism as an official policy and its flirtation with ideas of the transnationalism, lectures will focus on issues of cultural contact and intercultural exchange, the role of culture in nation-building, Canadian literature's preoccupation with history and mythology, and its preferred form of historiographic metafiction, as well as Canada's self-promotion as a country open to immigrants while confronting accusation of marginalisation and racialization.

Required Reading: Articles on Canada, selected poems and short fiction (consult StudIP), the plays The Rez Sisters by Tomson Highway and Rice Boy by Sunil Kuruvilla, the graphic narrative Riel by Chester Brown and the following novels: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables (excerpts); Michael Ondaatje, In the Skin of a Lion; Joy Kogawa, Obasan; and Timothy Findley, The Wars.

Registration: in StudIP (until October 31)

This class will introduce you to core texts and developments of contemporary Canadian literature in English. We will read some of the most exciting authors of Canada's multicultural literary industry, including Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro, Michael Ondaatje, Thomas King, Fred Wah and Rita Joe. We will place the works of these authors in the context of Canada's multicultural society and discuss in how far the texts develop, challenge and contribute to the construction of Canadian identity today. In addition, students will be familiarized with central theories and themes of Canadian literature as they have emerged over the past decades.

Readings: Please get a hold of the following books: Margaret Atwood, Moral Disorder (2006), Thomas King, A Short Story of Indians in Canada (2005), Alice Munro, Dear Life (2012), Michael Ondaatje, Divisadero (2007)

Other texts, including poems by Fred Wah, Rita Joe and secondary sources, will be provided as master copies or via StudIP at the start of the semester.

Requirements: Regular attendance, active participation, oral presentation and final exam and/or term paper.

Registration: via StudIP until 18.10.13.

The sea, sea voyages, sailors, ship-wrecks and ships figure prominently in many popular and canonical anglophone texts. Although the maritime setting suggests recurring plots and themes, post-modern, postcolonial and neo-Victorian fiction creatively draws on and rewrites sea voyages. On this course we will discuss classics from the turn of the 19th/20th century as well as recent texts which take up the idea of sea voyages at the turn of the 20th/ 21st century. We will especially focus on the sea and ship as important literary spaces and the communities of sailors and travelers they forge on board.

Students will be expected to prepare at least one handout and write two response papers. The novels should be read prior to the start of term.

Readings: R. L. Stevenson, Treasure Island; Joseph Conrad, "Falk"; Yann Martel, Life of Pi; Amitav Ghosh, Sea of Poppies. Shorter texts will be made available on StudIP.

Registration: via StudIP until November, 6th.

The Victorian period is frequently dubbed the "age of things" as the Victorians seemed to be especially fascinated with the proliferation of objects in and outside their homes. During this period museums were founded, the Great Exhibition of 1851 drew millions of visitors, the first department stores were opened, and due to thriving trade with the colonies and burgeoning mass production, all social classes could afford more goods than ever before. On this course we will discuss texts in the light of a postulated "material turn" in the study of Victorian literature and approach three novels from the angle of material culture studies and thing theory focusing on what kind of things and material practices they represent. Students taking this course should be willing to prepare at least one handout and write two response papers. The novels should be read prior to the start of term.

Readings: Elizabeth Gaskell, Cranford; Wilkie Collins, Hide and Seek, Charles Dickens, Great Expectations. Shorter texts will be made available on StudIP.

Registration: via StudIP until November 5th.

Kommentar Cultural Studies is an interdisciplinary area of research, exploring the ways and forms in which human beings experience the world. The theoretical concepts which will be analysed are concerned with the relations between cultural forms and their social, political and economic context as well as the symbolic attributions to practices of everyday life. The module is meant to give students an introduction to and overview of British Cultural Studies. This course is designed to accompany the introductory lecture series on British Cultural Studies (Cultural Studies VL) and help deepen students' understanding of the texts by discussing the various theories sketched in the lecture series. The focus will be on an active examination of the relevant critical ideas and theories, while the development of British Cultural Studies and the application of theories to fields of literary and cultural practice will also be considered. Please note: To ensure a good level of supervision, the number of participants is strictly limited to 25.

Kommentar This course provides an introduction to American cultural history from the period of British settlement in the 17th century to the Civil War and the Reconstruction Era in the late 19th century. We will read some of the most important and influential texts (sermons, speeches, legal documents, etc.) that both reflect and shape the cultural trajectory of the American colonies and the early United States. In addition to exploring these texts, students will do independent research on a selection of key terms that are essential for understanding the continuities and ruptures in the historical development of American culture.

Please be aware that this is a work-intensive, yet very profitable course. It teaches you "what every Americanist must know," and thus presents a necessary prerequisite for taking advanced classes in American Studies.

Reading: Primary texts and other material will be made available in a reader at "Klartext." For contextualization and background study, all participants please purchase Paul Boyer, ed. The Enduring Vision, 7th edition (Boston: Houghton, 2010; ISBN-10: 1439081794).

Students in B.EP please note: Credit in this class is required in order to successfully complete module B.EP.31. You may also attend part II (late 19th century - present) for the "Top-Up Modul B.EP.T31".

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between September 1 and October 15 is required. For final registration, participants need to be present and prepared in the first session.

In addition to exploring these texts, students will do independent research on a selection of key terms that are essential for understanding the continuities and ruptures in the historical development of American culture.

Please be aware that this is a work-intensive, yet very profitable course. It teaches you "what every Americanist must know."

Reading: Primary texts and other material will be made available in a reader at "Klartext." For contextualization and background study, all participants please purchase Paul Boyer, ed. The Enduring Vision, 7th edition (Boston: Houghton, 2010; ISBN-10: 1439081794).

Students in B.EP please note: You may only take this class in "Top-Up Modul B.EP.T31". Credit in part I (colonial period - Civil War) is required for B.EP.31.

Registration: Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between September 1 and October 15 is required. For final registration, participants need to be present and prepared in the first session.

452527 Aufbaumodul 1: Medieval English Literature and Culture N.N.,
Proseminar SWS: 2; Anz. Teiln.: 30
Do 10:00 - 12:00 Raum: Oec OEC 1.162 , wöchentlich
Do 10:00 - 12:00 Raum: KWZ 0.606 , Klausur am: 13.02.2014

Voraussetzungen E-Proseminar B.EP.01

Organisatorisches Die Anmeldung zu folgenden Modulprüfungen erfolgt über diese Veranstaltung: B.EP.204, M.EP.02b (Klausur). Eine Anmeldung zu den Modulen der alten Prüfungsordnung ist nur Studierenden möglich, die vor WS 2012/13 eingeschrieben waren; die Anmeldung zur Prüfung erfolgt in diesem Fall direkt über das Prüfungsamt und nicht über FlexNow.

Kommentar This fundamental course intends to develop and improve your critical competence as well as translation skills in the study of medieval English literature. We will be working with a range of set texts from the entire medieval period (e.g. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Bede's Account of Caedmon, The Dream of the Rood, or Chaucer's Franklin's Tale) and introduce you to the analysis of the lexical, formal, stylistic, and cultural aspects of various genres of medieval writing. The intensive study and discussion of limited selections of texts will develop your close commentary skills. You will also have the opportunity to have a brief look at manuscript sources. First session attendance is mandatory.

Kommentar Be it the ice-cold sea of the opening lines of "The Seafarer", or the fascination with the "Wonders of the East" - Old English literature is rich in allusions to and images of the natural world. In this seminar students will explore the intricate relationship between Old English texts and the so-called "book of nature". While literature reflects human attitudes towards the natural world, it is at the same time a means of perceiving it. Analyzing selected Old English texts, both poetry and prose, students will deepen their knowledge about medieval views of the world and the attitudes of medieval men towards their environment. At the same time they will become acquainted with the uses and function of natural imagery in literary texts.

Kommentar If Old English is renowned for its poetry, the prose texts left behind by Old English authors deserve just as much attention and praise. For one, the number of prose texts exceeds that of lyric poetry by far. What is more, Old English prose texts can often be assigned to a specific date and an author, which helps us contextualize the interests of a contemporary audience. These interests were broad, covering history and theology, the natural world and language and philosophy. More pragmatic prose texts, such as laws, recipes and homilies, are extant as well. In this course we will study and discuss a selection of prose texts from different periods and different areas in order to widen students' ability to analyse Old English texts, and to provide access to the rich knowledge of the Anglo-Saxons.

| Kommentar | In this lab course we will look at the implementation of the syntactic theory that is presented in the "Introduction to syntax": the minimalist program. The minimalist approach to language addresses the key concepts of syntactic analysis, namely, structure-building and structure-changing in a conceptually motivated theoretical framework. We will work out the basic ideas of minimalist syntax step-by-step and discuss them on basis of English data. We will focus on empirical phenomena like sentence formation, questions, passives etc. and see how they are analyzed in a principled way. Textbook: Adger, D., 2003, Core Syntax, A Minimalist Approach, Oxford University Press The Syntax lab and the Introduction to syntactic theory course shall be attended simultaneously. There will be two written exams (mid term and end term); as both courses make a unit, parts of the exam can be assigned in the "Introduction to Syntactic Theory" or in the lab class. | |

| Kommentar | Every native speaker of English can distinguish good from bad English sentences. But how can they do that? Speakers must have (unconscious) knowledge about English grammar. Unravelling this knowledge is the job of syntacticians. In this course, we will investigate this remarkable capacity of the human mind and we'll see what principles and rules underlie the grammar of English. We will also look at what new questions rise in the study to this capacity with respect to language change, language variation and language acquisition There will be two written exams (mid term and end term); as both courses make a unit parts of the exam can be assigned in the "Introduction to Syntactic Theory" or in the lab class (where we will primarily practice syntactic theory). | |

As humans, we have remarkable linguistic abilities: we are able to understand an unlimited number of sentences, including sentences that we haven't heard before. The knowledge that allows us to accomplish this incredible feat is largely unconscious. In this class, we will aim to uncover this knowledge by formulating and testing hypotheses about the interpretation of sentences and their parts. At different points in the class, we may make connections with related fields, like language acquisition. This class will suit you if you are interested in linguistic meaning, are keen on analytical thinking and enjoy theory-building. Regular class participation and class homework are required.

This course provides basic guidelines for teaching English as a foreign language in schools. Individual sessions will be devoted to the role of the teacher, the language learner, teaching methods and learning theories, task-based language teaching, teaching grammar, vocabulary, listening and speaking, reading and writing skills, testing, feedback and correction, and the use of media and literary texts in foreign language classes.

Reading: A comprehensive reader will be provided at the beginning of the semester (copyshop Klartext).

Requirements: Regular attendance and active participation. Out-of-class background reading will be set each week as an essential part of the course. Students will document their learning process with a portfolio. A 1-2 page entry is due every week so that feedback can be provided continually throughout the course. Final deadline of the portfolio is March 3rd, 2014. There will also be a weekly one-hour tutorial. The tutorials take place in the second half of the week. Prospective students must choose one of the tutorials and register for it via StudIP

The number of participants per course is restricted to 25 students.

Registration via Stud.IP starts on Monday, September 16th at 10.00.

Kommentar Freitag, 10.01.2014 (Beginn 14:30 am Seminarort) - Sonntag, 12.01.2014 (13:00)
Der Termin für eine Abschlusssitzung (Präsentationen) wird gemeinsam verabredet.

Games can enhance group atmosphere and build trust and cooperation; they can be used to introduce new topics, deepen insight into different perspectives (e.g. in a role play) and foster language learning in all areas of skills. Teachers can use existing games especially designed for the foreign language classroom, they can utilize common game formats (such as Taboo or Charades) for language learning purposes, include interaction and dialogue games from the field of drama pedagogy - they can even invent their own games, tailored to their learning goals and groups. But how to do that?

In this class, we will be testing, reflecting and refining games for the foreign language classroom on all abovementioned levels. As a theoretical framework, we will be looking e.g. at theories of playful and wholistic (language) learning and work out from theory and experience basic principles for games and playful exercises to function in a foreign language classroom: How to scaffold the materials and input? How to prevent students from thinking that playing can not be learning? How to ensure "proper" language learning in a vivid and obviously not teacher-fronted learning environment?

Finally we will also be working towards a product: You will be developing your own game (a whodunit role play) as a group. But don't worry, you will receive help and guidance to make this work! Also, in order to come up with the necessary creativity and group atmosphere, this class will take place outside of Göttingen, probably in a guest and seminar house in the Harz mountains.

Costs: 2/3 of the costs are refunded by the university (bewilligte Studienmittel für Exkursionen). There will be an amount of approximately 30EUR to be paid for by yourselves.

Credits and examination:

By the end of the Blockseminar, we will only have developed a rough sketch for your own game. Your further job will be to refine and elaborate these ideas into usable teaching material. Your examination (on a date to be agreed on, towards the end of term) will be a presentation (30 minutes), to be held on the teaching material you have developed, the learning goals you are planning to achieve with them and the theoretical principles you have based your ideas on.

Registration: Prospective participants should register in advance via StudIP. The number of participants is restricted to 15 students. Registration starts on Monday, September 16th at 10.00.

Di 08:00 - 10:00 Präsentation am: 04.02.2014

Kommentar Is visual material helpful to teach a foreign language? How can we visually support language learning? And how can we use images to teach literature and culture? This advanced seminar will deal with various aspects of imagery and visual art, such as their functions and benefits for language, literary and cultural instruction. By dealing with images foreign language classes can also contribute to the overall aim of developing students' visual literacy.

We will analyse the illustrations of schoolbooks, deal with photographs, graphic narratives and films. We will also try out and reflect on various methodological approaches (analytical and creative) and collect practical ideas for your own future teaching.

Reading: A reader with secondary texts will be provided at the beginning of the semester.

Requirements: Regular attendance, active participation, presentation, short reflection in written form (all in English). You should also attend the seminar on graphic narratives by Prof. Glaser.

Kommentar Comic-books, visual literature, graphic novels, graphic narratives, sequential art, visual-verbal literature... These terms keep occurring in research as well as in didactic teaching units. Together with the fact that new works in the comics medium are published daily, it shows that we are at present experiencing a 'comics renaissance'. This development is closely connected to the emergence of the graphic novel in the 1980s. Although being on the rise and having sparked the attention of literary criticism, graphic novels are still on the fringes of English language teaching. In this course we will approach the graphic novel from a didactic perspective and explore the vast teaching potential of this special form of literature in the comics medium. Our observations will thereby concentrate on the two autobiographical primary texts American Born Chinese by Gene Luen Yang and Persepolis by Marjane Satrapi.

Requirements: Regular attendance, active participation, short oral exam (all in English).

Registration via Stud.IP starts on Monday, September 16th at 10.00. The number of participants is restricted to 20.

Kommentar Due to both technological improvements and social developments during the 19th century in Britain, the opportunities for women writers to get published greatly increased. Many of these texts have developed into canonical voices and, thus, greatly influenced both scholarly and artistic work until today. But what exactly do the works of authors like Jane Austen or the Brontë sisters entail to be repeatedly chosen for film adaptations in the entertainment industry? This course aims at investigating why and how the film makers have picked up these novels in order to transform them into highly successful movies. For a thorough analysis of the films, we will focus on basic techniques and methods of film analysis in order to understand the aesthetic concepts used in each film and discuss them by asking ourselves if and why they suit characteristics of popular culture.

Readings: Corrigan, Timothy; Patricia White. The Film Experience. An Introduction. Boston, New York: Bedford, St. Martin's. 2012.

Registration: via StudIP (until Oct. 7)

Kommentar In this course, we will have a look at the American circus and sideshow tradition, with a focus on the late 19th and early 20th centuries. More specifically, we will analyze the representation of "human curiosities" in circus films and sideshow photography. At the turn of the century, the exhibition of "exotic" and "extraordinary" bodies in circuses and sideshows was a flourishing business and constituted a central aspect of the popular amusement and entertainment industry. We will look at circuses and sideshows as "heterotopias," as social spaces that are somewhat different from one's everyday surroundings and that, consequently, offer a place to negotiate "otherness," difference, and hybridity. By scrutinizing the representation of "human curiosities" in American film and photography, we will investigate the cultural work marginalized bodies perform in challenging the social order and in redefining the line between "normality" and "deviance," in particular. Our primary material will include the films Freaks (1932) by Tod Browning, At the Circus (1939) by the Marx Brothers, Walt Disney's Dumbo (1941), The Elephant Man (1980) by David Lynch, The Funhouse (1981) by Tobe Hooper and the photography of well-known "freak portraitists" Charles Eisenmann, Mathew Brady, and Diane Arbus. We will also have a look at promotional material for circuses and sideshows, such as pamphlets, posters, advertisements, and lithographs.

Assessment: Class participation, including readings and class discussions; group presentation; term-paper.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between March 1 and April 1 is required. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session.

Kommentar This course offers you help and guided feedback while working on your individual research topic. In two sessions at the beginning of term we help you choose a particular topic from diverse areas such as hagiography, heroic poetry, penitentials, Chaucer's poems, or lawcodes and lyrics. You will then study your topic independently, writing drafts of your research paper which you can discuss in two personal tutorials (one-on-one or one-on-two) throughout the term. Aufbaumodule 1 and 2 are prerequisites for this course.

Kommentar Be it the ice-cold sea of the opening lines of "The Seafarer", or the fascination with the "Wonders of the East" - Old English literature is rich in allusions to and images of the natural world. In this seminar students will explore the intricate relationship between Old English texts and the so-called "book of nature". While literature reflects human attitudes towards the natural world, it is at the same time a means of perceiving it. Analyzing selected Old English texts, both poetry and prose, students will deepen their knowledge about medieval views of the world and the attitudes of medieval men towards their environment. At the same time they will become acquainted with the uses and function of natural imagery in literary texts.

Kommentar If Old English is renowned for its poetry, the prose texts left behind by Old English authors deserve just as much attention and praise. For one, the number of prose texts exceeds that of lyric poetry by far. What is more, Old English prose texts can often be assigned to a specific date and an author, which helps us contextualize the interests of a contemporary audience. These interests were broad, covering history and theology, the natural world and language and philosophy. More pragmatic prose texts, such as laws, recipes and homilies, are extant as well. In this course we will study and discuss a selection of prose texts from different periods and different areas in order to widen students' ability to analyse Old English texts, and to provide access to the rich knowledge of the Anglo-Saxons.

Kommentar This fundamental course intends to develop and improve your critical competence as well as translation skills in the study of medieval English literature. We will be working with a range of set texts from the entire medieval period (e.g. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Bede's Account of Caedmon, The Dream of the Rood, or Chaucer's Franklin's Tale) and introduce you to the analysis of the lexical, formal, stylistic, and cultural aspects of various genres of medieval writing. The intensive study and discussion of limited selections of texts will develop your close commentary skills. You will also have the opportunity to have a brief look at manuscript sources. - Kommentar Since the mid 90, the Government & Binding theory, known from the 'introduction to syntactic theory" has been replaced by the so-called Minimalist Program. This Minimalist Program aims at formulating a syntactic theory with fewer theory-internal assumptions and tries to provide general cognitive explanations for linguistic phenomena. In this course, using both a textbook and some articles, we will try to understand the essentials of minimalism.
- Textbook: N. Hornstein et al. Understanding Minimalism (Cambridge Textbooks in Linguistics). Cambridge, CUP.
- Requirements: active participation in class; Klausurähnliche Hausarbeit.

- Organisatorisches Registration in Stud.IP: 1 Sept - 18 Oct, 2013
- Kommentar One of the central topics in syntax and semantics concerns negation and negative polarity. Negative Polarity Items are elements, such as English any-terms, that may only appear in clauses that in some way count as negative. Compare, for instance, I read any book* with I didn't read any book. The existence of NPIs gives rise to a series of questions. E.g., What is the exact distribution of NPIs? Why are certain elements sensitive to the negative of the clause? Do they all come about in one type? How do children acquire these elements? When and how did they enter the language? On the basis of a small number of articles we will address these questions in this course.
- Requirements: active participation in class; Klausurähnliche Hausarbeit.

- Kommentar Linguistics and literature are often treated as two entirely separate fields of study. This class explores how the two interact. How can insights in grammar and semantics be helpful to understand the special flavour, undertones, side messages and other effects of literary texts? How can semantic theory — being based on the notions of truth/falsity — be applied to storytelling which is not supposed to be about true persons and events? What has semantic theory to say about notions like narrator or perspective of texts? The class will introduce you to the research and questions at the Courant Centre Text Structures and offers the possibility to take part in its projects.

Many of the examples will be from English, and will be of use and interest to future teachers of English. In addition to Standard British English, we shall also look at examples from Popular London English, American English, Scottish English, and other European languages like Polish, Spanish and French. We shall also examine Autosegmental Phonology, metrical Phonology and contemporary Optimality Theory. Credits will be awarded on the basis of regular attendance, giving an Oral Report and writing a Term Paper. A precondition of attendance is some basic familiarity with the principles of phonetics evidenced by successful participation in a British or American English Phonetics course and an E-Proseminar in Linguistics. |

Fr - Klausurähnliche Hausarbeit am: 28.03.2014

Organisatorisches Registration in Stud.IP: 1 Sept - 18 Oct, 2013

Kommentar In the first half of the course we will discuss topics in pragmatics that have been investigated experimentally, such as reference resolution and implicatures. Whenever possible, we will complement studies that focus on adult speakers with those that focus on acquisition.

The second half of the course will be hands-on: students will learn how to devise and conduct their own experiments, and how to interpret the results.

Any readings will be made available through StudIP.

Requirements: Attendance in the first session is mandatory.

Nachweis: Klausurähnliche Hausarbeit (writing up the results of the experiment)

| Kommentar | This course is designed to help those who wish to practice giving formal speeches or presentations in English. Although most students have had experience giving classroom presentations, most have had no training in formal oratory. In this course we want to take things a step further than what typically happens in a classroom setting: do you need to give a formal introduction to someone? Are you a guest speaker at a conference? Do you need to deliver a paper? Do you have to speak-in English!-in front of dozens or even hundreds of people? We will work on strategies of formal public speaking, and we will listen to speeches and give speeches, and at the end of the course the student should feel much more confident about speaking in English in public in a formal situation. The student's grade will depend upon two oratorical exercises: 1., a formal introduction of a speaker, and 2., a formal speech. Prüfungsleistung: 2 Referate. | |

Organisatorisches Die Anmeldung zu folgenden Modulprüfungen erfolgt über diese Veranstaltung: M.EP.02b (Klausur), B.EP.11b, M.EP.02b(-L), M.EP.05b (Hausarbeit). SKs nach Absprache in der ersten Sitzung.

Kommentar In recent years selected medieval English poems have re-entered the collective memory of contemporary Britain through ground-breaking modern translations. Two of these, Seamus Heaney's Beowulf (1999) and Simon Armitage's Sir Gawain and the Green Knight (2009), are the most illustrious representatives of this revival and will form the centre of this course. Classes will, among other aspects, tackle the formal, stylistic, semantic, and political specifics of these translations and assess their independent merits as new literary creations. Textual analysis is accompanied by an introduction to translation theory. Knowledge of Old and/or Middle English is desirable but not compulsory. Students are asked to purchase a copy each of S. Heaney, Beowulf: A Verse Translation (Norton Critical Editions), ed. D. Donoghue (New York & London: Norton, 2002) and S. Armitage, Sir Gawain and the Green Knight (London: Faber & Faber, 2009).

In this Colloquium we will read and discuss works of fiction, drama, and poetry that have been published only very recently. The intention is to approach new literature without any standard interpretation or preconceived notion in mind. Students will have the chance to practice their journalistic skills, and, in order to get credits, each participant should write two short literary reviews (roughly 2 pages each). We will meet on a regular basis every two weeks; so there should be enough time for every participant to be prepared. The course syllabus will be the result of a democratic process: suggestions can be made on StudIP by editing the Wiki page, and in the first session we will decide which books to read.

Klausur: Students taking this course for the Abschlussmodul M.EP. 06a should please contact the instructor to arrange for the oral exam.

Skandinavische Kinder- und Jugendliteratur, aber auch entsprechende Texte aus verschiedenen englischsprachigen Ländern erfreuen sich seit vielen Jahrzehnten großer Beliebtheit, werden übersetzt, imitiert und adaptiert. Ziel dieses Seminars ist es, eine vergleichende Bewertung von Entwicklungen in der Kinder- und Jugendliteratur zweier großer und heterogener Kulturräume vorzunehmen. Zu den untersuchenden Themen werden auch folgende gehören: Fantastisches, Mädchenbilder, Modernismus, Adoleszenzgeschichten, Außenseitertum, metaphysische Sinnentwürfe, Aspekte der Detektivgeschichte und Text-Bild Bezüge.

Primärliteratur: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables; A.A. Milne, Winnie-the-Pooh; Joanne K. Rowling, Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone und Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire; Jeff Kinney, Diary of a Wimpy Kid; Michael Gerard Bauer, Don't Call Me Ismael!; Neil Gaiman, Coraline; Mark Haddon, The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time; Astrid Lindgren, Uppippi, Kalle Blomqvist und Ferien auf Saltkrokan; Tove Jansson, Die Mumins - Eine drollige Gesellschaft; Ragnar Hovland, Alfred der Bär und Samuel der Hund; Sven Nordqvist Pettersson und Findus (Wie Findus zu Pettersson kam); und Nina E. Grontvedt, Ich bin's, Oda.

Empfohlene Sekundärliteratur (für Anglisten): Kimberley Reynolds, Children's Literature: A Very Short Introduction.

Das Seminar wird in der Anglistik, Skandinavistik und Komparatistik angeboten. Die Teilnehmerzahl ist deshalb in der Anglistik auf 10 Personen beschränkt. Die Unterrichtssprache ist Deutsch. Studierende der Anglistik verfassen ihre Hausarbeit in englischer Sprache.

Anmeldung (für Teilnehmende aus der Anglistik): in StudIP (bis 18. Oktober)

Kommentar

This seminar will explore the diversity of Canadian fiction, mirroring the heterogeneity of the country's inhabitants, regions and concerns. Apart from issues of mapping and exploration as well as immigration and integration, discussion will focus on the foregrounding of regional aspects, the representation of the diametrically opposed ways of life in metropolitan areas and the countryside, and the recent move of writers beyond the Canadian nation.

Required Reading: a selection of short fiction and the following novels: Tomson Highway, Kiss of the Fur Queen; Mary Lawson, Crow Lake; Carol Shields, Unless; Thomas Wharton, Icelfields; and Dionne Brand, What We All Long For, and Michael Ondaatje, The Cat's Table. All the novels should be read before classes start. There will be a test on your reading knowledge in the second week of classes. Attendance of the seminar is tied to the passing of this test.

Registration: in StudIP (until October 18)

Kommentar

Graphic narratives have over the last few years gained in popularity among readers and have at the same time become objects of scholarly research. This seminar will examine the gradual emergence of the graphic novel in the field of popular culture, the emphasis being on its being positioned as both cultural product and practice. The theoretical approaches taken to analyse graphic novels will derive from visual culture studies, postmodernism and intersectionality. Aspects addressed in our discussions will include: text-image relations, intertextuality and intermediality, the adaptation of conventional genres into graphic narratives, as well as the use and manipulation of social issues and thus the novels' potential for social criticism.

Readings: Neil Gaiman, The Sandman (excerpts); Shaun Tan, The Arrival; Alan Moore, The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen (vols. I and II); Posy Simmonds, Gemma Bovery; Bryan Talbot, Alice in Sunderland; Doxiadis/Papadimitriou, Logicomix: An Epic Search for Truth; Neil Gaiman, Coraline; and various Pride and Prejudice adaptations.

Required secondary literature: Scott McCloud, Understanding Comics. Important: This text must be read before classes start. (There will be a test on your reading knowledge of this text in the second week of classes.)

Registration: in StudIP (until October 18)

Kommentar This class will introduce you to core texts and developments of contemporary Canadian literature in English. We will read some of the most exciting authors of Canada's multicultural literary industry, including Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro, Michael Ondaatje, Thomas King, Fred Wah and Rita Joe. We will place the works of these authors in the context of Canada's multicultural society and discuss in how far the texts develop, challenge and contribute to the construction of Canadian identity today. In addition, students will be familiarized with central theories and themes of Canadian literature as they have emerged over the past decades.

Readings: Please get a hold of the following books: Margaret Atwood, Moral Disorder (2006), Thomas King, A Short Story of Indians in Canada (2005), Alice Munro, Dear Life (2012), Michael Ondaatje, Divisadero (2007)

Other texts, including poems by Fred Wah, Rita Joe and secondary sources, will be provided as master copies or via StudIP at the start of the semester.

Requirements: Regular attendance, active participation, oral presentation and final exam and/or term paper.

Registration: via StudIP until 18.10.13.

459413 Literature and the Visual Arts in the 19th Century
Hauptseminar SWS: 2; Anz. Teiln.: 25 Georgi, Claudia
Mi 10:00 - 12:00 Raum: Verfügungs VG 3.106 , wöchentlich
Fr - Abgabe Hausarbeit am: 28.03.2014

Kommentar The class examines the interrelation between 19th-century literature and visual arts such as painting, drawing, ceramic art, etc. How do intermedial references in literary texts comment on these other art forms? What are the processes of medial transposition that transform literary texts into other media and vice versa? How does media combination merge literature and other media? And what does this tell us about the conditions of production and reception, the status or the function of literature and the involved art forms?

In order to consider such questions we will analyse 19th-century poems and novels that provide system references or individual references to actual or imaginary works of art, are combined with illustrations or transformed into paintings or film adaptations. The examples include poems by John Keats, Alfred Lord Tennyson, Robert Browning and Dante Gabriel Rossetti, illustrations for Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and comments on the role of painting and the arts in Oscar Wilde's novel The Picture of Dorian Gray. Theoretical texts by Werner Wolf, Irina Rajewsky and others provide the necessary terminology to further a better understanding of general issues of intermediality.

Readings: John Keats, "Ode on a Grecian Urn" (1819); Alfred Lord Tennyson, "Mariana" (1830), "The Palace of Art" (1832), "The Lady of Shalott" (1833); Robert Browning, "My Last Duchess" (1842); Dante Gabriel Rossetti, "The Blessed Damozel" (1850); Lewis Carroll, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865); Oscar Wilde, The Picture of Dorian Gray (1890)

Kommentar A brief look at introductions to literary theory published in the last ten to fifteen years reveals that quite a lot of authors agree on that we have entered an age "after theory". "Theory" had its heyday in literary and cultural studies in the 1970s and 1980s as it was shaped by structuralism and poststructuralism and the writings of Claude Lévi-Strauss, Roland Barthes, Michel Foucault, Julia Kristeva and especially Jacques Derrida. In recent years, this "traditional" form of theory has experienced a crisis, and, as a result, the field of theory has changed considerably. Today, we are faced with a variety of different approaches: cultural theory, media theory, gender theory, queer theory, performance theory.

It is the aim of this class to introduce students to the study of theoretical texts as well as to give an overview of the most important movements. In order to apprehend the field of theory, we will briefly look at older approaches that were all influenced by the linguistic turn in one way or another. Afterwards, we will read and analyze contemporary text. However, the focus of this seminar will be on media theories of recent years, especially on theories of literature as a medium. A reader with the texts discussed in class will be available as a downloadable file on StudIP two weeks before the beginning of term.

Introductory Literature: Peter Barry, Beginning Theory, Manchester: Manchester UP, 2008. Jonathan Culler, Literary Theory. A Very Short Introduction, Oxford: Oxford UP, 2011. Tilmann Köppe & Simone Winko, Neuere Literaturtheorien, Stuttgart & Weimar: Metzler, 2008.

Kommentar Skandinavische Kinder- und Jugendliteratur, aber auch entsprechende Texte aus verschiedenen englischsprachigen Ländern erfreuen sich seit vielen Jahrzehnten großer Beliebtheit, werden übersetzt, imitiert und adaptiert. Ziel dieses Seminars ist es, eine vergleichende Bewertung von Entwicklungen in der Kinder- und Jugendliteratur zweier großer und heterogener Kulturräume vorzunehmen. Zu den untersuchenden Themen werden auch folgende gehören: Fantastisches, Mädchenbilder, Modernismus, Adoleszenzgeschichten, Außenseitertum, metaphysische Sinnentwürfe, Aspekte der Detektivgeschichte und Text-Bild Bezüge.

Primärliteratur: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables; A.A. Milne, Winnie-the-Pooh; Joanne K. Rowling, Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone und Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire; Jeff Kinney, Diary of a Wimpy Kid; Michael Gerard Bauer, Don't Call Me Ismael!; Neil Gaiman, Coraline; Mark Haddon, The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time; Astrid Lindgren, Uppippi, Kalle Blomqvist und Ferien auf Saltkrokan; Tove Jansson, Die Mumins - Eine drollige Gesellschaft; Ragnar Hovland, Alfred der Bär und Samuel der Hund; Sven Nordqvist Pettersson und Findus (Wie Findus zu Pettersson kam); und Nina E. Grontvedt, Ich bin's, Oda.

Empfohlene Sekundärliteratur (für Anglisten): Kimberley Reynolds, Children's Literature: A Very Short Introduction.

This seminar will explore the diversity of Canadian fiction, mirroring the heterogeneity of the country's inhabitants, regions and concerns. Apart from issues of mapping and exploration as well as immigration and integration, discussion will focus on the foregrounding of regional aspects, the representation of the diametrically opposed ways of life in metropolitan areas and the countryside, and the recent move of writers beyond the Canadian nation.

Required Reading: a selection of short fiction and the following novels: Tomson Highway, Kiss of the Fur Queen; Mary Lawson, Crow Lake; Carol Shields, Unless; Thomas Wharton, Icefields; and Dionne Brand, What We All Long For, and Michael Ondaatje, The Cat's Table. All the novels should be read before classes start. There will be a test on your reading knowledge in the second week of classes. Attendance of the seminar is tied to the passing of this test.

Registration: in StudIP (until October 18)

Graphic narratives have over the last few years gained in popularity among readers and have at the same time become objects of scholarly research. This seminar will examine the gradual emergence of the graphic novel in the field of popular culture, the emphasis being on its being positioned as both cultural product and practice. The theoretical approaches taken to analyse graphic novels will derive from visual culture studies, post-modernism and intersectionality. Aspects addressed in our discussions will include: text-image relations, intertextuality and intermediality, the adaptation of conventional genres into graphic narratives, as well as the use and manipulation of social issues and thus the novels' potential for social criticism.

Readings: Neil Gaiman, The Sandman (excerpts); Shaun Tan, The Arrival; Alan Moore, The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen (vols. I and II); Posy Simmonds, Gemma Bovery; Bryan Talbot, Alice in Sunderland; Doxiadis/Papadimitriou, Logicomix: An Epic Search for Truth; Neil Gaiman, Coraline; and various Pride and Prejudice adaptations.

Required secondary literature: Scott McCloud, Understanding Comics. Important: This text must be read before classes start. (There will be a test on your reading knowledge of this text in the second week of classes.)

This class will introduce you to core texts and developments of contemporary Canadian literature in English. We will read some of the most exciting authors of Canada's multicultural literary industry, including Margaret Atwood, Alice Munro, Michael Ondaatje, Thomas King, Fred Wah and Rita Joe. We will place the works of these authors in the context of Canada's multicultural society and discuss in how far the texts develop, challenge and contribute to the construction of Canadian identity today. In addition, students will be familiarized with central theories and themes of Canadian literature as they have emerged over the past decades.

Readings: Please get a hold of the following books: Margaret Atwood, Moral Disorder (2006), Thomas King, A Short Story of Indians in Canada (2005), Alice Munro, Dear Life (2012), Michael Ondaatje, Divisadero (2007)

Other texts, including poems by Fred Wah, Rita Joe and secondary sources, will be provided as master copies or via StudIP at the start of the semester.

Requirements: Regular attendance, active participation, oral presentation and final exam and/or term paper.

Registration: via StudIP until 18.10.13.

The class examines the interrelation between 19th-century literature and visual arts such as painting, drawing, ceramic art, etc. How do intermedial references in literary texts comment on these other art forms? What are the processes of medial transposition that transform literary texts into other media and vice versa? How does media combination merge literature and other media? And what does this tell us about the conditions of production and reception, the status or the function of literature and the involved art forms?

In order to consider such questions we will analyse 19th-century poems and novels that provide system references or individual references to actual or imaginary works of art, are combined with illustrations or transformed into paintings or film adaptations. The colloquium invites advanced students who are preparing or already working on their B.A. or M.A. thesis. It will provide the opportunity to present and discuss your work in progress and receive valuable feedback. Further sessions will be on academic writing, research, and current developments in American cultural and literary studies as well as critical theory.

The course also gives students the opportunity to suggest specific topics and/or theoretical texts relevant to the field of American Studies and with regard to current research projects that may be taken up in individual class discussions. If you have a particular topic or text in mind that you want to propose for discussion, please send an email to Prof. Tischleder (preferably before the beginning of the semester).

If you wish to take this Kolloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09 or B.EP.51) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance (at least three weeks before classes commence)!

| Kommentar | In recent years selected medieval English poems have re-entered the collective memory of contemporary Britain through ground-breaking modern translations. Two of these, Seamus Heaney's Beowulf (1999) and Simon Armitage's Sir Gawain and the Green Knight (2009), are the most illustrious representatives of this revival and will form the centre of this course. Classes will, among other aspects, tackle the formal, stylistic, semantic, and political specifics of these translations and assess their independent merits as new literary creations. Textual analysis is accompanied by an introduction to translation theory. Knowledge of Old and/or Middle English is desirable but not compulsory. Students are asked to purchase a copy each of S. Heaney, Beowulf: A Verse Translation (Norton Critical Editions), ed. D. Donoghue (New York & London: Norton, 2002) and S. The course also deals with all major aspects of the dating, transmission, editing, and understanding of the text in its possible Anglo-Saxon contexts. As preparation students are required to purchase and read(!) S. Heaney, Beowulf: A Verse Translation (Norton Critical Editions), ed. D. English has a grammatical aspect system contrasting progressive (she was writing a novel) vs. non-progressive (she wrote a novel) and perfective vs. imperfective. This relates to the way the situation described is presented as ongoing or not, in its totality or with focus on the internal temporal structure. Before any statement is made, speakers have to prepare the message by activating their knowledge of the event as a whole, they select the material they want to put into words and then decide on the order in which it should be presented. These processes relate to the phase of conceptualization in language production (Garrett 1980, Levelt 1999). Encoding a message into words and grammatical structures can only be language specific, but recent studies (e.g. comparing English and German) show that even the conceptualizer is influenced by the structural properties of the particular language, i.e. preverbal conceptual categories which are grammaticized in a language are shaped by specific linguistic categories.

Features play a crucial role in modern linguistic theories. Classification, paradigms and distributional patterns, for instance, are based on features. Lexical items are also definable as bundles of features (see (1)) and terms like feature sharing, feature checking and feature valuation have a central function in contemporary syntactic theory. The topic of features becomes even more interesting when syntactic projection is considered. Which features are input to the syntactic component and what is their impact on syntactic products in general (see (2))? To what extent do they trigger syntactic operations like movement (see (3)) and how do they affect the interfaces to semantics and phonology (see (4))?

Focusing on features and projections, we will investigate these and related questions.

(1) prepare categorial feature [V], selectional feature [D], semantic features [agent], [theme] etc.

(2) Given lexical items X, Y are bundles of features (F), what projects if X and Y combine?

$X = F_1, F_2$ $Y = F_3, F_4$ [${}_2 X Y$]
 $[_{F_1} X Y]$ $[_{F_1, F_2} X Y]$ $[_{F_1 F_2 F_3 F_4} X Y]$ $[_{F_2 F_4} X Y]$...

(3) [+wh], [+Q], [+tense], [+agr] etc.

$[_{+wh} \text{ Which song}]_j [_{+Q} \text{ do you like } t_j \text{ best}]?$

(4) I wonder [what he is doing (what)] interpreted as an embedded question

I like [what he is doing (what)] interpreted as a free relative

In both examples: highest position of what is to be pronounced

A reference list will be made available in class.

Meaning and grammar of languages change over time. In this class, we will investigate why grammars change over time and why certain elements either become part of the grammar and why they may disappear again. We'll mainly focus on English and German cases of language change, but make excursions to other languages as well.

This course forms some overlap with the course on Historical Pragmatics, hence they take place simultaneously.

Kommentar This course is designed to help those who wish to practice giving formal speeches or presentations in English. Although most students have had experience giving classroom presentations, most have had no training in formal oratory. In this course we want to take things a step further than what typically happens in a classroom setting: do you need to give a formal introduction to someone? Are you a guest speaker at a conference? Do you need to deliver a paper? Do you have to speak in English!-in front of dozens or even hundreds of people? We will work on strategies of formal public speaking, and we will listen to speeches and give speeches, and at the end of the course the student should feel much more confident about speaking in English in public in a formal situation. The student's grade will depend upon two oratorical exercises: 1., a formal introduction of a speaker, and 2., a formal speech.
Prüfungsleistung: 2 Referate.

Kommentar This course is designed to help those who wish to practice giving formal speeches or presentations in English. Although most students have had experience giving classroom presentations, most have had no training in formal oratory. In this course we want to take things a step further than what typically happens in a classroom setting: do you need to give a formal introduction to someone? Are you a guest speaker at a conference? Do you need to deliver a paper? Do you have to speak in English!-in front of dozens or even hundreds of people? We will work on strategies of formal public speaking, and we will listen to speeches and give speeches, and at the end of the course the student should feel much more confident about speaking in English in public in a formal situation.
